Subject No. 110.

Amalgamation of the Representative Assembly and Legislative Council.

Mr. C. Vasudeva Rao, Chikmagalur Taluk.

Summary of Representation.

The budget discussion and the interpellations are common to both the institutions, excepting the subject of Legislature. The laws passed by the Government of India are generally adopted in the State with modifications according to the local requirements. The members of the Representative Assembly discuss the laws that are to be initiated by the Government in the State. Government may introduce the subject on any Law that may have to be adopted in the State before the Dasara Representative Assembly. A Committee may sit to consider the pros and cons between the Dasara and the Birthday Session of the Assembly, and after the Committee's due consideration, the subject may be placed before the Assembly during the Birthday Session for final decision and Royal assent. The Legislative Council and the Representative Assembly may therefore be amalgamated.

Note:—Withdrawn.
